I took part in the Community Teaching Program for 6 weeks, over the months of February and March 2015, I can honestly say it was a life changing experience, and I whole-heartedly and without reservation recommend it to anyone prepared to work hard and have an amazing time.

The project takes place in the town of Urambo on the West part of Tabora region. The community house is very central in its location, being very close to all of the school and places where volunteers work. I volunteered primarily at a primary school known to locals as "Ukombozi primary school, I taught around 5 or 6 30 minute lessons everyday, teaching them basic english such as body parts, and family members. Each class held around 70 children, which was very intimidating at first! However, in my first week, the community staff member trained me and guided me through how to best and most effectively teach, thus by my second week I was ready and raring to go! It was very rewarding teaching at that school, and a lot of fun. The kids absolutely love the Volunteers, and always said "Hello Annah!" whenever I passed them in the street after school and at weekends.
