Building Veggie Garden in a School.

Program Date: 14/01/2020

I volunteer for a week in an environmental project. The program was to build veggie garden for schools and plant trees. The student would eat the veggies from the garden for more nutrition's in their diet.

Accommodation was in a secure hostel with three local meals a day and friendly staff. In the first day, they showed me the town and previous projects they have done. Everyday after breakfast, we took bicycle rides to the school, then work a bit, and we go back at around noon when it gets very hot. Then we have lunch at the hostel and then you have the rest of the time for yourself. On the weekend they can organize tours for you. I went to Mt. Meru waterfall on the weekend. You could also visit a Maasai village. It was a good experience learned how people in the village live and was immersed into the culture.
